Maria Francké

Chair, Scottish Property Federation
Director, Maria Francké Planning

Welcome to this Tenth SPF Annual Dinner, held once again at the prestigious EICC. A particularly warm welcome to our three event sponsors, Bank of Scotland, TFT and Turley, without whom these events simply could not occur. I am delighted that we are once again supporting Spifox in this their 40th year. Many congratulations to Spifox Chair Tom Cromar and his predecessors for their superb services in raising over £3m of donations for children's projects across Scotland.

Our after dinner speaker this year needs little introduction. The Rt Hon. the Baroness Davidson of Lundin Links came to prominence as the Leader of the Scottish Conservatives between 2011 and 2019, and then leader of the Conservatives at Holyrood until 2021. I am looking forward to her expert insights on the state of UK and Scottish politics as we near a critical UK General Election over the next year or so.

I am delighted to be welcoming so many guests and members from the south of the UK, led by BPF CEO Melanie Leech who will oversee proceedings this evening, and BPF President Mark Allan, CEO of Landsec. The major investment at Buchanan Galleries is currently one of the largest commercial property projects on the cards in Scotland, and it is a project that represents what's at the core of our industry, namely investing in the future of our towns and city centres to support their sustained economic growth, now and for the future.

This evening is about enjoying an informed, social occasion with your colleagues and clients with an opportunity to consider the key issues for the real estate industry. We know we have a highly ambitious agenda to improve our built environment to meet the government's net zero challenge. But above all we must retain Scotland as a positive location for the much needed investment required to bring forward jobs, better workplaces, 'build-to-rent' and PBSA accommodation across Scotland. Without this support, we will struggle to deliver the built environment that Scotland needs. I am sure these challenges will be only part of the discussion across the Dinner Tables this evening and I look forward to meeting as many of you as possible on the night.
Kind regards,

Maria

After-dinner Speaker

The Rt Hon. the Baroness
Davidson of Lundin Links

Ruth Davidson is a journalist, broadcaster, author, and politician. She served for eight years as leader of the Scottish Conservatives, during which time she transformed the party's prospects, leading to its greatest electoral results in thirty-five years. She also played a prominent role in both the Scottish independence and EU referendum campaigns, arguing her case in stadium television debates at the Glasgow Hydro and Wembley Arena. As the first openly gay leader of a major political party in the UK, and the first party leader to give birth while in office, Ruth has broken barriers throughout her time in public life.

A regular contributor to debates on gender, inclusion and equality, Ruth talks about authentic leadership from a first-hand perspective. A former BBC journalist and Territorial Army soldier, Ruth understands how important individual expression, trust and developing leadership skills can be within large organisations. Her close professional relationship with successive Prime Ministers, and membership of UK Cabinet, gives her a unique insight into the current political environment north and south of the border.

Ruth's book, Yes She Can – Why Women Own the Future, is a positive appraisal of gender advancement across the globe; how far women have come to achieving equality and, crucially, how much road there is still to travel. It draws on direct testimony from world-beating women as diverse as Christine Lagarde, Dame Katherine Grainger, and Melinda Gates, who Ruth interviewed in a fascinating series of conversations while researching her work.

Despite operating exclusively in the Scottish Parliament, Ruth has successfully built a UK-wide platform. A gifted political communicator with a modern, real-world touch, she is as at home on Have I got News for You, The One Show, Celebrity Chase, and The Great British Bake Off: Stand Up To Cancer, as she is on Newsnight, Question Time and Andrew Marr. She has been named one of Time magazine's 100 most influential people of the year, alongside international figures from sport, media, and politics including New Zealand Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern and Prince Harry.

Ruth's professional career prior to politics was in broadcast journalism, variously operating as a presenter, producer, and documentary maker. Since leaving the party leadership, Ruth has returned to journalism, regularly providing political commentary for the Telegraph, Mail on Sunday and the Evening Standard as well as developing broadcast projects for both television and radio. She also hosts a weekly show on Times Radio.
